ABOUT THE EVENT

APS 5-6, choose professional success! Now is the time to excel in your role by developing a comprehensive grip on data literacy.

Ongoing digital transformation within government has led to a necessary increase in professional data competency. Statistical evidence is essential to making informed decisions for the good of the public and as an APS 5-6 professional, you need practical skills to drill down into the core data literacy competencies outlined in the APS Data Capability Framework.

Through expert facilitation, this workshop will unpack the fundamentals of data literacy in a government context, and give you the skills to better understand the data you deal with on a daily basis. Learn to ask the right questions, interpret and clearly express data trends and insights, translate data into impactful and accessible action, and use data to inform decision-making.

73% of APS Managers identified Employee Skill and Capability as a barrier to effectively using data in Government. Don't be a part of this statistic... book your spot today!

YOUR FACILITATOR

Kristy Delaney is a researcher and evaluator with more than twenty years of experience in delivering high-guality research and evaluation in human services, across government and non-government sectors.
