Manufacturing is a cornerstone of Australia, creating a diverse and dynamic job market, contributing billions in exports and fueling economic growth. Now, this critical industry is being radically reshaped by technology, changing the way products are designed, fabricated and sold, driving productivity and innovation across the country.

But to realise the true potential of this new manufacturing era, we need leaders ready to take the reins on a changing workforce, and we need to address that we are still missing a large chunk of the industry's intelligence, capability, and insights.
